

Create your Dial

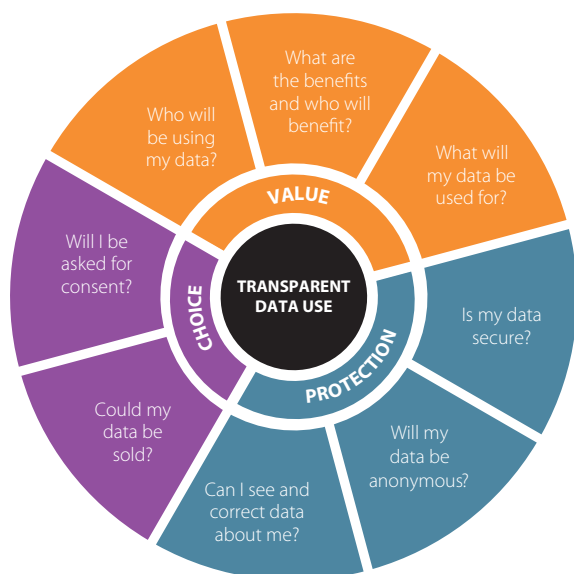

Create your Dial

Our engagement with New Zealanders told us what features of data use matter most.

For people to feel comfortable about a proposed data use, they first need good information on eight key questions that we have grouped under the headings Value, Protection and Choice.

Work through the eight key questions to create your own Transparent Data Use Dial and let people know how you will use their data in an easy and transparent way.

If you'd like to know more on the background of the Guidelines please visit our About page.

How organisations should use the Guidelines

Organisation answers the eight key questions about data use (proposed or current)

Organisation assesses the acceptability of its answers against Guidelines.

Is there sufficient Value, Protection & Choice?

If NO

Reconsider data use

If YES

Does the data use have one or more of these features:

- it's novel for community it affects
- has a substantial impact on whānau, hapū, iwi or Māori communities
- has a substantial impact on low trust communities

If YES

Consider if there is a need for active engagement with affected communities. Be willing to make changes to how data will be used.

If NO

Display answers to the eight key questions to everyone who is affected by the data collection and use.

Step 1: Create your data use dial

Name

My business

URL

Enter the url of your organisation or business unit

Question 1. What will my data be used for?

Question 2. What are the benefits and who will benefit?

Question 3. Who will be using my data?

Question 4. Is my data secure?

Question 5. Will my data be anonymous?

Question 6. Can I see and correct data about me?

Question 7. Could my data be sold?

Question 8. Will I be asked for consent?

